

From My One-on-One Personal Relationship With the Creator of the Universe

From a portion of a writing* dated 6/21/2015 (Father's Day): "... This is a special day of celebration in your nation where fathers are celebrated. It is a special day for fathers to be celebrated but also to be proud of their children for thinking of them and waiting to celebrate a special day with them. It is a special day of love shown by their children to their fathers and fathers to receive their love. You see, My people for the most part do not understand the love of their Heavenly Father. And, I, as their Heavenly Father, long to shower them in love and ways they know nothing about.

When you were a little girl, you wanted no other place to be but with your Daddy. If he was working in a muddy ditch, you were there. If he was skinning a squirrel that he had hunted and killed, you were there. Wherever he was working, if on the roof, you were there. You shadowed him—wanting to be near him and no other place. Debbie, I want My children to shadow Me.

I want them, letting go of all they think they are, all they think they know, all they think they should become to shadow Me, with Trust and Faith, and follow Me as I lead them to places they must go, but we will go together. How can I take them to places they have never been if they aren't willing to Trust and have Faith. When life as lived it ceases, their hearts will be broken. They will see and experience what none have seen and experienced before. Will they even think to seek Me in their desperation? I'm the One who knows what they do not know. I am the One who can lead and teach and guide them to places they don't know exists. I am the One who loves them. I gave My life for them so they could live with Me for eternity. ..."

From 5/25/2013: "... When you were a child you lived your life as a child, but now you have grown in wisdom and understanding; the childish ways do not serve you any longer. It is the ways of the Father that you desire to know and understand. When you were a child, the ways of a child were satisfying and fulfilled your desires and longings, but now you are more mature in your understanding and knowledge and therefore the ways of the child do not satisfy your desires/your cravings. When you were a child you sought the ways of others to fulfill you and fill your life with sustenance, purpose and meaning. But now you have discovered what few have yet to discover. The ways and traditions of men do not satisfy. They leave you thirsty and hungry—seeking to know what they do not seek—seeking to be a treasure hunter while others are content with crumbs left for you by others.

You see, Debbie, you no longer seek the ways and traditions of men, but seek the heart of your Heavenly Father—to seek Him with a desire/mission to learn all He will share with you—not for selfish gain to manipulate/control others—but to quench the ever longing thirst and hunger to know the Heavenly Father in a way others don't know exists. You see, you are no longer satisfied with accepting what others accept so willingly. You want to examine it, test it, prove it, compare it to what you know to be true because in your desire, your thirst and hunger to learn about your Heavenly Father, you have uncovered His ways. These ways have become apparent to you, but not so to those who have accepted crumbs from others as truth.

When My people seek Me with their whole heart, mind, and soul—when they truly desire to know the truth—when their existence depends on their knowing the truth, do I withhold from them or shower them with wisdom and understanding. Do I give them a crumb and expect them to grow in wisdom and understanding or do I bathe them in My love for them. They seek after signs and wonders and are deceived through the acceptance of crumbs. And I want to shower them with Hope that only comes from a personal relationship with their Creator."

From a portion of a writing 12/4/2013: "... When you look in a mirror, Debbie, what do you see? Do you see the love of the Lord in the face looking back at you? Debbie, you don't even want to look in the mirror. You see age and pain and heart break. You see someone you don't want to see. You see broken.

And, what do I see when I look at you? I see into your heart. Do I see layers and layers of deception hiding the inner most desires of your heart? Do I see right into the depths—nothing hidden—nothing held back from Me. I see a heart that desires to seek Me above all else. I see a heart that desires all I want to share. I see a heart willing to surrender all hopes, dreams, desires in order to draw close to Me. So what has the love that desires Me above all else cost you? It costs you everything. There can not be anything between your desires and My love. It is all or nothing to share the kind of relationship we have with one another. If you have your own agenda, it will come between you and I. If you have your own desires, your desires will come before My own. To be/do what you were created to be/do, you must surrender all your hopes, dreams, desires, plans, projects, agendas. Otherwise you will do what you think is best and not what is good for My Kingdom.

Well meaning people who do what they think is best benefits themselves and not necessarily My Kingdom plans. It takes one who has experienced the fire of the Fiery Furnace—purifying and refining the heart—burning away/consuming with fire that that is not of My love. It takes one who has allowed Me to mold them with My hands on the Potters Wheel from a lump of clay—once broken and rebuilt in My image – not the image of a man pleaser. It takes one who knows of the threshing floor—having been beaten/scourged of all that held them captive and now knows freedom in living life in My love.

When you look in the mirror, Debbie, don't just see where you have been and the toll it has taken, but see where you are going."

A portion from 3/9/2012: "... Know that I love every one of My children. I love every creation I create. But I love, above all, those who seek after Me with their whole hearts, minds, and souls. For it is those who are willing to go where I lead them that can accomplish what I, when I was on your planet could not.

Some come to Me filled with fear and want forgiveness for their sin. They are forgiven. Some come to Me and want what only I have to give—peace and Hope. They are forgiven. Some come to Me because they want to learn about My Kingdom. They, too, are forgiven. Any who call out My name and ask for My love to come into their hearts—they are forgiven. There are those who realize they are captives and cry out to be freed from their captivity—I set them free. There are those who ask for great wealth, power, and position. I can't help them. There are those who come with their hearts broken, their hands empty, their lives in despair—these are the ones that are willing to listen to My voice and follow Me, who are willing to overcome the tests and trials necessary to build them back into the creations they were created to be. These are the ones who with their entire heart, mind, and soul draw as close as they possibly can to learn of Me. They desire what I have to share above all other and will sacrifice their hopes, desires, plans in order to be/do what the Creator has created them to be/do. They don't have a position or title; they don't seek to be wealthy; their desire above all other is to draw close to their Heavenly Father.

Who are they? They are willing. And in their willingness, they discover a treasure so great it cannot be valued. But it is their treasure. This is a treasure reserved only for those willing to sacrifice their own hopes, dreams, and plans to find it. Are they worthy? Every child of God is worthy but are they willing to sacrifice their hopes, dreams, and plans to discover the treasure? It is the treasure once one possesses it that knows what they know and knows that they know it. ... It isn't the heart who has never submitted to the will of the Father that finds treasure, it is the one who comes broken hearted with empty hands and in despair that finds the treasure; what others never even think to seek."

And from 8/30/2012: (Before Covid –19)—this was in 2012: “Debbie, My people slumber as if nothing of harm could touch them. They wake up each morning; they trudge through the muck and mire of the Canyon of Unbelief and then return to their slumber. They never/very little think on things of My concern. They are consumed with details of the world’s ways of living their lives. What is important to Me is of little importance to them—they don’t even know what is important in My Kingdom. They chase after vanity, greed, materialism and My desires for their lives go unfulfilled. They think what they are pursuing is success, but it only leads to their failure in so many parts of their lives. So what does a man gain if he gains the whole world but loses his soul? If that man’s success leaves him in a state of hopelessness with feelings of worthlessness, uselessness, helplessness, then his pursuit of success has failed him. How about his children or his wife? How does his pursuit of success affect them?”

Men’s true sense of worth comes from their being a child in My Kingdom. They have worth because of My love for them. There is no other worth that can be received as unconditional. Any worth derived from the ways of the world has a cost associated with it that must be paid. For those who come into My Kingdom the cost has already been paid—nothing more to do than accept freely what has been given.

Man has difficulty accepting what he cannot earn/achieve as success. Man wants to change the design in order to fit his patterns/ways of life—the ways that give him a sense of worth/achievement. But the design has already been created by the Designer. It is for man to discover the treasure found in the current design—not as all-knowing, but as a treasure hunter—seeking to discover the depths of knowledge and understanding that he does not know. When life as lived it ceases, men will have the opportunity to become treasure hunters—not just scholars and business men running a business**, but true treasure hunters—seeking to depths they never knew existed. This is the message of Awakening.”

Please stay safe and well during these difficult times and seek the Lord with your whole heart, mind, and soul! And always know that you know what you know and know you know it that God Loves You!!!
